

Your dissertation or final year project

And your employability

Your dissertation or final year project can help you get a career focus/direction

The subject that you choose for your dissertation or final year project may help you decide on a job sector you want to work in or an area of post-graduate study that you want to pursue.

Your dissertation or final year project can give you examples of your skills and experience to use in CVs, applications and interviews

All applications, covering letters and CVs require you to provide examples of your skills, experience and knowledge in relation to the job or course.

You will develop skills through everything you do, including your dissertation and final year project. When making applications, reflect on what is involved in your project or dissertation and the skills developed.

You can use these to evidence how to meet the requirements of a job or course.